Jane's clever idea

Jane lived in Fairfield. Everyone in the town knew her, but they never saw Jane walking. Jane loved her bike and loved riding to the shops and to school, but she loved riding her bike around the lake in the park most.

Last Friday, when Jane rode her bike between two park seats, a rabbit hopped out in front of her. She stopped really quickly and fell on the ground. Jane was OK because she always wore a helmet, but her bike wasn't. 'Oh no!' she thought. 'Now I need a new front wheel!'

'Mum!' she said, when she got home. 'Can you buy me a new front wheel for my bike?' 'Oh dear!' her mother answered. 'We need to buy a new swimsuit for your sister and a present for your grandmother. We can't buy you a new front wheel, too. Sorry, Jane.'

'But I need my bike to ride to school and the shops and around the lake, Mum!' Jane said.

'You can walk to school and the shops and go for nice walks in the park, Jane,' her mother answered.

Jane didn't like that idea. She went upstairs to her bedroom and thought and thought. Then she took a pair of ice skates from under her bed and went to find her friend, Sam.

'Sam!' she said. 'I need a new wheel for my bike. Have you got one? You can have these ice skates. Would you like them?'

'I'd like your ice skates,' Sam answered, 'but I haven't got a wheel for your bike. Would you like my tennis racket? I never play tennis now.'

'Well,' Jane said. 'I like your tennis racket more than these old ice skates. OK! Thanks.'

She gave Sam her ice skates and Sam gave Jane her tennis racket. Then Jane went to find her friend, Matt.

‘Matt!’ she said. ‘I need a new wheel for my bike. Have you got one? You can have this tennis racket. Would you like it?’

‘I’d like your tennis racket,’ Matt answered, ‘but I haven’t got a wheel for your bike. Would you like these five CDs? The band’s really cool, but all this music is on my new laptop now.’ ‘Well,’ Jane said. ‘I like those CDs more than this tennis racket. OK! Thanks.’ She gave Matt the tennis racket and Matt gave Jane his five CDs. Then Jane went to find her friend, Paul.

‘Paul!’ she said. ‘I need a new wheel for my bike. Have you got one? You can have these CDs. Would you like them?’

‘I’d like your CDs,’ Paul answered, ‘but I haven’t got a wheel for your bike. Would you like this old skateboard? It’s too short and too slow for me.’

‘Well,’ Jane said. ‘I like your skateboard more than these CDs. OK! Thanks.’

Jane gave Paul the CDs and Paul gave her his skateboard. Jane took it, stood on it and then rode back down the street on it. Jane’s friend, Clare, was outside her house. She saw Jane and called, ‘Hi! What a fantastic skateboard. Where did you get that?’

‘Paul gave it to me,’ Jane answered, ‘He said it was too short and too slow for him. It’s OK for me, but I don’t really want it. I want a new wheel for my bike!’

‘Well,’ Clare said. ‘My bike’s very old, but both its wheels are fine. Would you like it?’

Jane started laughing. ‘Yes, I would. I’d love it! Thanks!’ she said. ‘And would you like this skateboard?’

‘Wow! Yes, please!’ Clare said. Jane gave Clare the skateboard and then rode Clare’s old bike home.

Jane’s mother was in the kitchen. ‘You look happy,’ she said.

‘Well,’ Jane said, ‘I’ve got not one, but two new wheels for my bike!’

‘What? How? Where from? When?’ Jane’s mother asked.

‘I can’t tell you now, Mum!’ Jane laughed. ‘I’m too busy.

I’ve got to fix my bike.

Then I want to ride around the lake six times before dinner!’

The perfect present

Jim's favourite teacher was called Miss Point. Miss Point helped Jim learn lots of different things. She taught him about words and work and earache and emails and ships and shapes. She was never angry when Jim made spelling mistakes and she played basketball with Jim and his classmates in their morning break. Miss Point was great and Jim wanted to give her a present. But he had no ideas.

Jim went for a walk along the river and then sat down to think. He watched the water. He watched a frog that jumped off an old boat and caught three fat flies in the river plants. He watched a lizard that slept on a rock. He watched two bees that buzzed in circles above some ducks.

It's so beautiful here. Jim said.

Mr and Mrs Star and their daughter, Grace, liked walking by the river, too. They stopped when they saw Jim. 'Hi, Jim. Are you all right?' Mrs Star asked.

'Hello, Mrs Star,' Jim answered. 'I want to give my teacher a present. But it's difficult. Can you help me choose one?'

'We can try,' said Grace. 'What does your teacher like?'

'She likes the internet and trips on the train and she loves weekends,' answered Jim. 'But I can't give her those.'

'No,' said Mr Star. 'You can't! What colour does she like?'

'She likes green,' Jim said. 'She painted our bookcase green. I'd like to give her a green apple tree or the prettiest green parrot in the world, but I can't do that.'

'No, you can't,' said Grace. 'Apple trees look nicer when they're growing in a field and parrots look prettier when they're flying in the forest!'

'How about a lime or some peas or beans?' asked Mrs Star.

'They're green.'

'No,' said Jim. 'I don't want to give her any of those things.'

'Then a salad?' asked Grace.

‘Yes!’ said Jim, ‘She likes salad! My aunt grows salad leaves in her garden. I can take her some of those ... But that’s not enough.’

‘Well, does she like the colour blue?’ asked Mr Star.

‘Yes,’ said Jim. ‘She painted our classroom door blue! I’d like to give her the beautiful blue sea or five hundred blue flowers, but I can’t give her those.’

‘No, you can’t,’ said Grace. ‘The sea looks nicer next to white sand, and blue flowers look more beautiful when they’re growing in the green grass!’

‘What about a blue bowl or pen or a blue watch?’ asked Mrs Star.

‘No,’ said Jim. ‘I don’t want to give her any of those things.’

‘How about some blue grapes, then?’ asked Grace.

‘Oh! She loves grapes! That’s a fantastic idea!’

Jim said. ‘And we grow grapes in our garden.’

I can take her some of those ... But that’s not enough.’

‘Does she like yellow?’ Mr Star asked.

‘Yes!’ answered Jim. ‘Yellow’s her favourite. Our classroom clock is yellow. I’d like to give her the sun or a yellow butterfly, but I can’t give her those.’

‘No,’ said Grace. ‘You can’t. The sun looks more beautiful above the mountains and yellow butterflies look prettier when they’re flying in the sky.’

‘What about a yellow apple, some lemons or a banana?’ asked Mrs Star.

‘No,’ said Jim. ‘I don’t want to give her any of those things.’

‘Cheese is yellow,’ Grace said.

‘Yes! Yes! She likes cheese! That’s a brilliant idea! We make cheese at home from my favourite cow’s milk,’ said Jim. ‘I know my teacher loves the internet and train trips and weekends, but she LOVES picnics, too. And green salad leaves, blue grapes and yellow cheese are great things to take on a picnic. I can give her those. Thank you for helping me choose a perfect present for Miss Point!’

Jim and the Star family jumped up and walked slowly home. The frog jumped up, too, and ate another fat fly.

Daisy's tiger dream

Daisy had a beautiful, big bedroom with big windows and a big balcony. She had lots of nice clothes to wear, different computer games to play, music to listen to and movies to watch. She had fantastic roller skates, a new guitar and hundreds of books, comics, paints and crayons.

'Oh! But I'm not happy,' she thought one night when she went to bed. 'I know! I can ask my parents to buy me some more exciting games and ... and a longer skateboard, a better bike and a newer laptop. Yes, that's a great idea!' Then Daisy went to sleep and had a very strange dream.

In her dream, Daisy saw a lake and a big mountain. She couldn't see the top of the mountain and Daisy couldn't hear any birds or any animals. She could only hear the wind.

There was a little white boat on the lake. Daisy got into it and, in the light of the moon and stars, the boat sailed quietly across the water to a cave.

When the boat stopped, Daisy got out and looked into the cave. She saw some steps and went down, down, down into the mountain. She counted the steps: 44, 45 ... 61, 62 ... 97, 98, 99, 100! When she stood on the last step, Daisy saw a small orange light in front of her.

The orange light got bigger and bigger. 'It's a tiger!' she thought, 'and it's coming nearer and nearer, but I'm OK. I'm brave. I'm not frightened.'

The tiger opened its mouth.

'I'm NOT frightened,' Daisy thought again.

‘Ask me a question, child,’ the tiger said quietly.

‘Why aren’t I the happiest child in the world? I have really cool clothes and lots of exciting games and brilliant CDs and movies.’

‘People aren’t happy because they have things, child,’ the tiger said. ‘Be a good friend and be kind to animals and enjoy the light from the sun, moon and stars. Do that and you can be happy again.’

Then Daisy woke up. She heard her phone. Her friends never called her before breakfast!

‘Hi, Daisy. It’s Jack here. You and I never talk at school, because you’re always too busy, but I can’t do our music homework. You’re very good at music. Can you help me with that? I’ve got a new guitar too. I know you’re very good at playing the guitar.

Can you ... can you help me learn to play the guitar too?’

Daisy thought about her dream. She smiled and said, ‘Yes, Jack. I can help you do your homework and give you guitar lessons!’

‘You’re really kind,’ Jack said. ‘Thanks a lot!’

Daisy went downstairs to have her breakfast.

Her mum was in the kitchen. 'Daisy,' she said, 'we've got something for you.'

'But I don't want a better bike or a ...' Daisy started to say. Her mum pointed to a black and orange kitten and said, 'Dad found it outside last night. Be kind to it. It needs a good friend!'

Daisy thought about her dream again. She picked the kitten up and smiled at it. 'Hello!' she said. 'What a pretty face! You look like a tiger that I know! But you're smaller and more beautiful.' 'What tiger?' Daisy's mum asked. But Daisy didn't answer.

'I'm really happy this morning, Mum,' she said. I can be a good friend.

'I can help Jack do his homework and learn the guitar. I can be kind to this funny little kitten – and look at the sun! It's a beautiful sunny day outside. Wow! What a great day!'

A busy Monday

The snow started falling on Friday night. It snowed all weekend too. On Monday morning, everything outside was white. 'It's not safe to drive today,' a man on the radio said. 'All the schools are closed. And the roads are too dangerous to go to the sports centre or to go to the circus this evening, everyone. Sorry!'

My mum and dad picked up their phones. Mum called the place where she works. She's a dentist. And Dad called the café where he works. He's a cook.

'No work today!' they said.

Mum said 'I must clean the hall rug.' 'And water all the plants, too. Let's have a busy day at home. I can make a meat and potato pie, then I'd like to paint the hall.'

‘Well,’ said Dad. ‘I must fix the washing machine, then I’d like to make some bread and some onion soup and then read my new e-book. Mark, you must clean your pet rabbit’s cage, feed the puppy and practise the piano. And how about making that model spaceship?’

‘All right,’ I said. ‘But some pieces are missing, I think. ... Oh! I’ve got a text from Alex.’

Alex is my best friend. I read his message and sent him a quick answer.

Alex helped me clean the rabbit’s cage. That wasn’t easy and we had to catch the rabbit! We didn’t feed the puppy because it was asleep on one of Dad’s sweaters and we didn’t want to wake it up. We practised on the piano. We aren’t very good, but we had fun!

Then we looked at the instructions to make the model spaceship. 'There are 57 pieces ...' I said, 'and we must start with these four little ones.' Alex counted the pieces. 'There are only 53,' he said. 'Those four little ones aren't here.'

'We haven't got all the pieces for the spaceship!' I called to my parents. 'Well, help me paint this hall!' Mum said.

'Or help me fix this washing machine!' Dad said.

'Or play your new computer game!' Alex said quietly.

I laughed. 'Great idea!' I said.

It's not the best computer game that I've got, but it's funny. Alex and I laughed a lot. We had to make the animals move really quickly to catch boats, trains or buses or ride in trucks or fly in helicopters.

At the end of the game, the kangaroo was in the supermarket, the lion was in the library, the zebra was in the cinema and the panda was at the funfair.

'Good game?' asked Dad.

'It was OK,' we answered.

'Lunch?' asked Mum.

'Fantastic!' we answered.

After lunch, Mum made a scarf and emailed all her old school friends.

Dad cleaned his football boots and tidied the basement.

Alex and I fed our sweet, little puppy, which was awake. Then we taught my parrot to say 'Busy Day! Busy Day!' Dad videoed it!

'Well!' Dad said. 'It WAS a busy day!'

'Yes,' I said. 'I like being busy. Alex and I cleaned the rabbit's cage, did some piano practice, took a kangaroo from a car park to the supermarket and a lion to the library, drove a zebra to the cinema and flew a panda to the funfair, fed the puppy, and taught our parrot to say 'Busy Day!'

'That's right, but what about making that model spaceship?' Dad asked.

'We couldn't find the last four pieces!' Alex said.

'Do you mean these?' Dad asked.

'I found them in the washing machine!'

'YES!' I said. 'HOORAY!'

The tomango tree

Tom lived on a farm. Behind the farm, there was a big forest on a hill. Tom liked walking there and climbing the trees where the forest birds sang and sang. There was a river near the farm where Tom often fished, too. He loved living in the countryside.

Tom's parents both worked on the farm. They fed their cows, sheep, goats and chickens and planted vegetables in their fields.

'I'd like to grow fruit here too,' his father often said. He tried to grow pears, but they were too small. He couldn't grow bananas. They were always too green. And the weather was too cold to grow kiwis, watermelons or pineapples.

'Find a fruit we can grow here, Tom,' his father said.

One morning, Tom woke up and walked to his window. The river looked like a mirror in the sun and the trees danced in the wind.

'Hmm,' Tom thought. 'Today is a good day to be in the forest.'

After breakfast, he put some water in his bag and started to walk up the hill. Up and up he went. At the top of the hill, Tom sat down under the tallest tree. 'This tree is really tall!' he thought. 'I want to climb it! Yes! Now!'

Up and up he climbed. From the top of the tree, Tom could see more hills, his family's farm buildings, their home, their truck and tractor and all of their fields. He could see the river and the sea, too.

Tom thought, 'I want to work on the farm and grow fruit. But I want to sail down that river and across the sea, too. One day, I want to go to countries where there are mountains, waterfalls and jungles. I want to do hundreds and hundreds of exciting things.'

Suddenly, Tom heard something. It was in the tree below him, but it wasn't a bird. 'It's a fruit bat – the kind of bat that only eats fruit,' thought Tom. 'Cool! I'm lucky to find one of those!'

Tom heard the fruit bat again, but he couldn't see it. He started to climb down the tree and saw something red behind a big leaf. It moved. 'A red fruit bat?' thought Tom. 'That's very strange!'

Tom moved the leaf, but the red thing wasn't an animal. It was like a kind of tomato or mango. And there wasn't only one. There were lots and lots of them. Tom picked one of the strange fruits and looked at it more carefully. Then he ate it. It was really good! Tom was hungry! He ate another one and another one. Then he picked five more and put them in his bag.

'I must give this fruit a name,' he thought. 'I know. It's a tomango!'

Tom climbed back down the tree and he ran home to show the fruit to his father.

‘Look, Dad!’ he called. ‘I found a tomango tree in the forest. We can grow this fruit here on our farm.’

And they did. Tom’s father took the five tomangoes and grew plants from them. Soon the family had hundreds of small tomango trees, and people came from the city to buy all the wonderful fruit that grew on them.

But there’s a strange end to this story. When he was older, Tom did lots of exciting things. He sailed down the river and across the sea. He climbed hills and mountains in different countries, and sometimes he came home and climbed trees again, too. But Tom never, never, found another tomango tree or heard a fruit bat in the forest above the farm again.

Do whales have stomach-ache?

My younger brother is called Fred. Fred's very interested in animals. He talks and asks questions about animals all the time. Fred's really interested in parrots, pandas, polar bears and penguins and lions and leopards and rabbits. But Fred's favourite animals live in the sea. He has posters of jellyfish, whales, dolphins, sharks and octopuses on all the walls of his bedroom.

Look at my picture, Mum. This is an octopus. Why do octopuses have eight arms?

Or are they legs?
Why are there little cups on their arms?

Fred doesn't stop talking when I'm doing my homework or when Mum's trying to read quietly.

'Sssssssssshhhh, Fred!'
we have to say sometimes.

Last Saturday, Fred wanted to go to the library in town to get a book called The Most Dangerous Animals in the World. He wanted to get a DVD called Leopard's Spots, too.

But Mum said, 'No, Fred. You don't look well. I want Aunt Jane to come and see you. You've got lots of little red spots on your face.'

Aunt Jane is a doctor. She knows all about red spots!

Fred looked in the mirror. 'But I'm not ill and my spots aren't scary and they don't hurt,' he said.

Do you know, Mum, leopards have spots, and there's a kind of dog called a Dalmatian that has hundreds of spots too?

'Yes, I know!' Mum said.

When Aunt Jane saw Fred, she asked 'Have you got any spots on your body? On your back, your shoulders or arms?'

'No,' Fred said. 'Octopuses have got eight arms. Did you know that, Aunt Jane? They've got three hearts too!'

'Have they?' Aunt Jane said. 'Can I look in your ears now?'

‘And do you know, Aunt Jane? A blue whale is the biggest animal in the world!’ Fred said.

‘Yes, Fred,’ Aunt Jane answered. ‘But can I look in your eyes now? That’s right. Look up! Good ... and down!’

‘And dolphins are the cleverest animals in the sea,’ Fred said.

‘Mmm,’ Aunt Jane said.

‘Have you got a cold or a cough?’

‘No,’ Fred answered and started talking again.

‘Sharks are the most dangerous kind of fish.

When a shark loses a tooth, they can’t go to the dentist. But it’s OK! Another tooth grows!

Do you think sharks have toothache sometimes?’

‘Fred, stop talking, please. I want to look in your mouth now! Say AAAAAHHHHH!’

‘AAAAAHHHHH!’ Fred said, and then started talking again!

‘And dolphins are good at bouncing balls on their heads. Do you think they have headaches sometimes?’

‘I don’t know, Fred,’ Aunt Jane said.

Then she smiled at him and said, ‘Well, you haven’t got a temperature, but you need some medicine and you mustn’t go shopping today. You can go to the shopping centre to get your book and DVD on Monday. OK?’

Aunt Jane opened a bottle of green medicine and put some on a spoon. Fred didn't like medicine. He stopped talking because he didn't want to open his mouth.

'You must open your mouth now, please, Fred,' Aunt Jane said.

But Fred didn't open his mouth.

Aunt Jane had a clever idea.

'Do you think whales have stomach-ache sometimes, Fred?' she asked.

Fred started to say, 'I—'

When Fred did that, Aunt Jane quickly put the medicine into his open mouth!

'That's horrible!' Fred said, but then he smiled. 'Hey! I like this medicine a lot. It's the nicest medicine in the world. Can I have some more?'

Aunt Jane laughed. 'No!' she said.

'You can have a glass of orange juice,' Mum said.

But then Fred started talking again. 'Whales don't drink orange juice, but they do have stomach-ache, I think. They have very big stomachs. Do you know they eat—'

'Sssssssssshhhh, Fred!' I said.

'Sssssssssshhhh, Fred!' Mum said and

'Sssssssssshhhh, Fred!' Aunt Jane said.

Do whales have stomach-ache?

The grey cloud

I was on a long, boring train ride with my aunt. I looked out of the window at the rain. The countryside looked grey and cold.

‘Tell me a story, Aunt Clare,’ I said. ‘One about the rain.’

‘All right,’ she said. This is the story she told me.

‘There was a small cloud in the sky above the apartment where Lily lived. Sometimes the cloud got angry because the wind was too strong, or because it was alone in the sky.’

When the cloud got really angry, it got slowly bigger and greyer. Its grey colour fell on to the roof of Lily’s apartment building. It also fell into Lily’s roof garden and when Lily went outside to skip, she couldn’t see the red and yellow flowers there. She could only see grey ones. Lily often got angry then, too.

Sometimes the cloud wasn’t only angry. It got really sad. When the cloud felt really angry AND sad, it felt worse and it cried and its wet rain fell on Lily’s windows and balcony.

Lily didn’t like being wet. She couldn’t go outside and dance on the garden table because she didn’t like getting her head, neck and shoulders wet. Lily often got angry AND sad then, too.

Sometimes the cloud wasn't only angry and sad. It often got frightened. When the cloud felt frightened, it felt colder. Then its snow fell quietly on the ground and rocks and on the mountains behind Lily's home, and water changed to ice. Walking in the snow and on the ice was difficult and dangerous. Lily often got angry, sad and frightened then too.

Monday wasn't a good day. The cloud was huge and very grey.

Lily couldn't see any light from the sun.

She couldn't see her feet on the ground.

And, at night, Lily couldn't see any light from the moon or stars.

Tuesday and Wednesday were worse. Nothing was different. On Thursday morning, when Lily got up and saw no light outside again, she thought, 'I've got to do something about this!' She climbed up the stairs to the roof garden.

'Cloud!' Lily called from the top of the roof. 'This is the worst day of my week! I love looking at you when you are small and white, and when you skip and dance and climb in the wind. But why are you huge and so grey now? What IS the matter?'

The cloud started to cry.

'The wind is strong and I am weak and I have no friends,' cried the cloud. 'That makes me angry and sad, and I get bigger and greyer. I feel worse and worse and then my rain falls.'

'Oh dear!' said Lily.

'And sometimes I get frightened because I have no friends. When I feel frightened, I get really cold and my snow falls,' added the cloud.

'Well, shall I be your best friend today? I know I can make you feel better again. Stronger too!' Lily said to the cloud and started to skip along the roof garden. 'And when you feel happy again, I can be happier, too!' she said.

'Come on! Let's skip!' Lily took off her coat and started to skip around the grey flowers and the cloud slowly started to skip around the sun.

'That's better, but more quickly! More quickly!' laughed Lily. 'Come on, my friend! Now, let's dance!' Lily jumped up onto the table, waved her arms around and started to dance and the cloud slowly started to dance in the wind.

‘Fantastic!’ laughed Lily. ‘Now, Come on! Are you feeling better or worse?’

‘Better!’ said the cloud.

‘Great! Then now, let’s climb!’ Lily started to climb her favourite rock and the cloud started to climb in the sky. ‘Higher, higher!’ Lily called.

And when the cloud skipped and danced and climbed with Lily, its colour changed from grey to white and a beautiful rainbow appeared in the sky. The cloud was happy again and Lily couldn’t stop laughing.

But it wasn’t always like that.

On some days of the year, the cloud’s rain and snow fell because it felt angry or sad or frightened again. Lily understood that.

‘We can’t always feel happy,’ Aunt Clare said. ‘But skipping, dancing and climbing and laughing and playing with really good friends can always help us feel better again. Now pick up your bag! Here’s our station!’

The fancy-dress shop

Last Tuesday, Jim sent Zoe a text message about his party. It said:

‘Great!’ thought Zoe. ‘Parties are always fun, but a fancy-dress party is very exciting!’ She went to tell her mother about Jim’s text.

‘It’s fun to dress up,’ said Zoe. ‘I haven’t got any fancy-dress clothes.’

‘Well,’ her mum answered, ‘we can go to the new fancy-dress shop in the town centre. They’ve got lots of exciting things to wear there.’

So after lunch, Zoe’s mother drove her to the fancy-dress shop in Duck Street!

When Zoe walked into the shop, she laughed! 'There are hundreds of things that I can wear here! Look, Mum! A firefighter's jacket and helmet, a fantastic snowman's costume, a nurse's uniform, a circus clown's trousers, a really cool panda costume! I can't choose!'

'How about this pineapple costume?' Zoe's mother said. 'Oh look! These kangaroo and kitten costumes are brilliant, too!'

'Ermm ... no. I don't want any of those.'

'Then what about this doctor's coat?' Zoe's mother asked.

'Ermm ... no.' But then Zoe saw a pirate's costume. She loved it.

'That's the best one! Can I try it, please?' she asked the man in the shop.

'Yes! You need a moustache and a beard for that costume, too. Here! Put them on,' he said, and gave her a curly moustache and a long black beard. 'There's a room at the back of the shop with a big mirror in it.'

Zoe carried the clothes and the beard and the moustache to the small room at the back of the shop and put on the trousers, boots, shirt, scarf and hat. Then she put on the moustache and beard. She smiled at her face in the mirror. 'I love this!' she thought. 'Yes. This is great. I'd like to be a pirate for one afternoon.'

Suddenly, Zoe felt the wind in her face. She looked down at her feet. They weren't on the floor of the small room at the back of the fancy-dress shop in Duck Street. She was on a big ship in the sea. Pirates ran up and down the ship. They all looked very busy.

'Come on!' one of the pirates shouted at her. 'We want some more treasure. Quick! Climb that sail and look for ships!'

But Zoe couldn't move! 'Am I dreaming?' she thought.

'What's the matter?' the angry pirate said. 'You aren't afraid of climbing the sails, are you?'

'Yes, I am!' Zoe answered.

'Then jump into the sea with the sharks!' he shouted. 'We don't want any frightened pirates on this ship!'

'This is getting scary! Where am I?' Zoe thought.

But then the pirate stopped shouting and looked at her carefully. 'I don't know you. Where did you come from? Did you come from another pirate ship?' he asked.

'No. I came from the fancy-dress shop in Duck Street,' Zoe said quietly. 'And I'd like to go back there now, please. I don't want to be a pirate for an afternoon.'

Then a huge wave splashed her face and hair. Water dripped off the end of her nose and off her moustache and beard. Her pirate hat, shirt and scarf got very wet, too.

She looked down at her feet again, but she didn't see the ship. She saw the floor of the shop. 'Mum!' she called. 'Come here quickly!'

What's the matter, Zoe?

'How did your face and all your pirate clothes get wet?' her mother asked.

'Don't ask me, Mum. I don't know!' Zoe said. 'But I know I don't want to wear this pirate costume again. Please give it back to the man.'

'All right. Would you like to change it for the alien costume?'

'No, Mum!' Zoe said and laughed. 'I don't want to go to the moon! Can I put on the kitten costume, please? Then children can come and play with me in our garden!'

Wear a funny costume and bring some of your favourite food.

Thanks for the invitation Lucy! I've got a costume I can wear. I love eating and I can bring that! I can bring my too. See you :)

Let's speak!

- 1 What do you like to do?
Where? Ask and answer.

What do you like doing?

I like reading.

Where do you like doing that?

In the park.

- 2 What can you see in the countryside? Listen to your friend and draw.

I can see a river.

- 3 Play the game. Make and say funny sentences.

A man is older than a boy.

A computer game is more exciting than a CD.

- 4 What can we do?
Talk to your friend.

This is boring. I like being busy.
What can we do now?

How about playing a computer game?

- 5 What would you like to do on Saturday? Talk to your friend.

- 6 What's the matter? Ask and answer.

- 7 Make a friend happier. Write a conversation and act it out.

- 8 What can you wear? Ask and answer.

Let's say!
