The village party

Sophia Walter and her brother, William, lived in a small village. On the last day of May, Sophia said to William, 'It's June next month and 21st June is the longest day of the year here, isn't it? Why don't we have an enormous party that day? What do you think? I looked on the calendar. That day is a Saturday this year. We can invite thousands of people.'

William laughed, 'Well perhaps a hundred. That's an amazing idea! I'd like to invite everyone in my group at college and you should send invitations to all your classmates, Sophia.'

'Right! And to everyone in the family AND everyone who lives in the village,' Sophia added.

'Good thinking!' said William. 'We could have party quizzes, races and competitions, too. I might win one for dancing.'

'William, you aren't very good at dancing ... sorry,' Sophia said. 'But, well, you ARE improving slowly ... Hey! Pop or rock music?'

'Both,' William answered. 'We can tell everyone to wear funny costumes as well.'

'Or their best clothes,' Sophia said.

'Let's say, wear funny costumes OR best clothes, then,' William said.

‘And we must put really long tables outside in our street and ask everyone to bring food,’ Sophia said.

‘Yes, excellent!’ William said. ‘Like pizzas, pieces of cheese, olives, pasta, salads, sandwiches ... and let’s ask Mum to make a huge butter and strawberry jam cake in the shape of our street.’

‘And milkshakes,’ they both said at the same time.

‘We can ask Mrs Trip to make those,’ William said. ‘Her chocolate milkshakes are delicious.’

‘Good thinking!’ Sophia said. Then she and William went to speak to their parents about their village party idea.

‘Fantastic!’ Mum said, and Dad agreed.

‘I can get prizes for the races, quizzes and competitions,’ he said.

‘Oh!’ Mum added, ‘We must have a running race for grandparents only! And a volleyball match in Mrs Trip’s front garden, too. We can put the net there.’

‘Wonderful!’ Dad said. ‘Oh, and Grandpa’s band can come, as well. They play pop and rock music.’

‘Grandpa’s band – brilliant!’ Sophia said.

‘OK,’ William said. He wasn’t so sure about that, but he liked the volleyball idea.

William and Sophia designed a party poster with a cartoon of the village on it and glued it to the wall on the corner of their street. It said: Village party! 21st June. 4pm to midnight. Ask Sophia and William WALTER for more information.

Everyone was excited about the party and Sophia and William worked hard. They wanted the party to be perfect.

On the morning of 21st June, the weather was dry and sunny. Neighbours carried out their tables and put them down the middle of the street and someone brought a hundred paper plates and plastic cups. Dad and two of his friends made a stage for the band to stand on and put lines of little flags with spots and stripes on them between the street lights.

Just before four o'clock, everyone started arriving. Some wore funny costumes. Lots brought delicious food with them. But then it began to rain.

'No! No! No!' Sophia said. 'What shall we do?'

'Don't worry!' said Mr Sand from the camping shop. 'See you in a minute.'

'No problem!' said Mrs Kite from the little clothes shop. 'I've got an idea.'

'Never mind!' said Miss Smart from the school office. 'I can help, too.'

Mr Sand came back with three huge tents. Mrs Kite came back with 24 umbrellas. Miss Smart came back with ten big towels. Everyone ran around under the umbrellas and hurried to move the tables and chairs and food inside the tents.

And, when they finished, the rain stopped and the sun came out from behind the clouds again. So, everyone helped to carry the tables and food back outside into the street again, and to dry any wet chairs with the towels. Then they sat down with their umbrellas and laughed and laughed.

At five o'clock, William entered the dancing competition, but he didn't win. Sophia's friend, Betty, did. At six o'clock, Grandpa's friend, Richard, won the sports quiz that Sophia wrote.

At six thirty, William's friend, Dan, won the hopping race. Mrs Trip won the skipping race and Sophia's grandmother won the running race for grandparents. At seven o'clock, Uncle Harry won a prize for the funniest costume. He looked like an octopus but couldn't hold eight sandwiches in his eight arms.

At about eight o'clock, Mr Walter stood up and said loudly, 'Let's thank Sophia and William for their fantastic idea and hard work. Thank you Grandpa's band for the great music, Mrs Trip for letting us use your garden for the volleyball match and for your delicious milkshakes and we mustn't forget to thank Mr Sand, Mrs Kite and Miss Smart for your help, too. What an adventure!'

'Yes! Hooray! Well done!' everyone said and clapped. No-one went home before midnight.

'That was such a cool day,' said William the next morning when he sat down quietly to read his new music magazine.

'Yes, it was brilliant,' said Sophia. 'Hey! Next year, shall we call it a summer festival and have a different ... ?'

'Sophia!' William said, 'It's much, much too early to start talking about that yet!'

Ben's wishes

I have an uncle who writes books for children. I didn't see my uncle very often when I was a child because he lived in Africa, but he came to see us sometimes. When he did visit us, he usually told me one of his stories. I loved them all but 'Ben's wishes' was my favourite. My uncle told it to me one winter when it was very cold outside. I was about ten, I think.

A boy called Ben had two older brothers. The older boys often felt hungry and often got angry because they were so poor.

'Go and work in the fields,' they said to Ben early each morning. 'Then bring home some vegetables and make an enormous bowl of soup for our dinner.'

Ben always answered in the same way. 'But I want to go to school and learn all about the world.'

Ben's unkind brothers just laughed and said, 'Don't be silly! You aren't clever enough to go to school like us.' So Ben didn't go anywhere. He just worked in the fields in the rain, digging and planting and planting and digging.

One really cold morning, Ben was planting some onions when he saw an old silver cup on the ground. He picked it up, sat down under a tree and cleaned it with his scarf. Then, very carefully, he put it down on the grass next to his rucksack.

Ben was tired and hungry but he only had five little olives to eat. He looked at the cup and said, 'I'm so lucky to have these olives, but I'd like a lovely warm drink, too.'

Suddenly, the silver cup was full of hot chocolate. Ben was very surprised. He drank it all, but he still felt cold. He looked down at his old jacket and at the cup again and said, 'I'm so lucky to have a jacket, but there are hundreds of holes in it. I wish ... I wish ... I could have a new coat.'

A wonderful coat made of wool suddenly appeared from somewhere in the sky. Now Ben was really surprised. He put it on. It felt soft and warm.

Then he opened a little book that belonged to one of his brothers. Ben looked at the cup one more time and said, 'I'm so lucky to have one book to read, but I'd like one hundred more books so I can learn all about the world, please.'

Suddenly, a hundred books fell from between the leaves in the tree above him. Ben couldn't believe it. He was so pleased.

He laughed and laughed, put the old cup in his pocket, carried the books home, sat down by the fire and read them all.

When Ben's older brothers came in through the door, Ben was still reading. They were angry. 'Where's our dinner? Where's our vegetable soup?' they shouted.

Ben looked up and said, 'I found an old cup in the field today. I think it understands about wishes. It gave me a hot chocolate, a warm coat and 100 really interesting books. I'm learning all about the world. It's amazing! I know all about its lands and its oceans and about all the creatures that live on the Earth as well now. So ask the silver cup for your dinner.'

The two older brothers looked at Ben's new coat, his new books and then at the silver cup on the table. One of them picked it up. He was angrier now. 'We have a wish, too. Give us our dinner. We want it this minute!' he said.

The empty bowls were suddenly full of delicious vegetable soup. The brothers couldn't believe it.

'Cup,' the oldest brother shouted. 'Give me a room full of money.'

'Give me more money than my brother and a room full of candy,' the other brother said.

Suddenly, there was candy and money everywhere. The brothers began to fight.

'Give me that cup,' one shouted.

'No!' the other one said. 'It's mine. It's not yours. Give it to me!'

The cup fell on the ground and broke, and all the candy, the money, the delicious vegetable soup, Ben's warm coat and the interesting books disappeared. They were nowhere in the house.

I felt really sad when my uncle told me that part of the story.

But then he added, 'But the cup couldn't make all the stories about the world disappear from Ben's head. And when Ben was a man, he visited all the countries in the world and wrote lots of stories about the animals and people who lived there to tell to children.'

I never knew my uncle's first name. I just called him Uncle. Perhaps, just perhaps, it was Ben.

Emma was on holiday but she was really bored. There were too many people in the hotel pool. She had no-one to play volleyball with and her parents just wanted to sit in the sun. Emma walked along the beach and sat down by a rock.

‘What a boring day,’ she thought. Then, something hit her on the head. It was a beach ball.

‘Sorry,’ a little boy said. He picked up his ball and stood in front of her. He was only about six or seven. Emma wanted him to go away.

‘What do you want?’ Emma asked him.

‘Nothing,’ he said. ‘But you look unhappy. What’s the matter?’

‘I’m bored,’ Emma said.

'We could look for treasure,' the little boy said.

Emma thought that was a silly idea. 'Where are your parents?'
she asked.

'They're on our ship, out there by the island. I'm the son of a pirate,' the boy said.

Emma laughed. 'There's no ship and you can't be a pirate,' she said. 'Pirates are only in films and stories.'

The boy didn't move. 'Believe me,' he smiled. 'I am the brave son of a brave pirate and our ship is there. You can't see it because you believe we're only in films and stories.'

Emma thought the little boy was funny, and suddenly she didn't feel bored. 'OK,' she said, and stood up. 'Let's explore the beach and look for treasure.'

The boy pointed at some rocks. 'Shall we begin looking there?' he whispered.

Between the rocks there were lots of pools of sea water. They were full of small sea creatures, beautiful stones and shells.

'Those stones and shells are lovely, aren't they?' the little boy said. 'They're a kind of treasure.'

'Hmmm,' Emma said. Then she saw something blue in the rock pool, too.

'What's that? It's a glove, isn't it?'

'Yes,' the little boy said. 'Perhaps someone lost it here.' He picked up the wet glove. 'This is a kind of treasure as well,' he said, and put it in a large bag that he carried on his shoulder.

Then they climbed over the rocks to the next pool. They could see something unusual in that one, too.

‘What is it?’ Emma asked. ‘It looks like a silver fork. Can you get it for me?’

‘Of course, I can,’ the little boy said. He pulled out the silver fork and put it in his bag, too.

Then Emma saw something else. There was an old pair of sunglasses in another rock pool. The little boy pulled his sleeve up over his elbow and took the sunglasses out of the water. ‘More wonderful treasure!’ he laughed.

Then they arrived at a fourth pool. The water there was really deep and the rocks around it hurt their knees.

‘It’s quite dangerous here,’ Emma said. ‘I don’t want to stay here. Let’s go back instead.’

But the little boy said, ‘Look! There’s a ring under that black and gold fish. I can get that for you, too. It’s the very, very best kind of treasure.’

‘Are you sure?’ Emma said. ‘That fish looks angry, doesn’t it? And it’s got really scary, big teeth. It might bite your fingers. That ugly crab might climb out and bite your toes, too.’

‘Don’t worry! These things aren’t frightening,’ he said. ‘I’m the brave son of a brave pirate. Deep water, fish with big teeth or ugly crabs are no problem for a child like me.’

The little boy took the glove, fork and the old pair of sunglasses out of his bag. He put on the glove and put the old pair of sunglasses on the end of the fork. Then slowly, slowly put his hand then his elbow down, down into the deep water. The brave little boy soon hooked the ring out of the water with the end of the sunglasses. He gave it to Emma.

‘Here you are,’ he said. ‘No problem!’

The ring was so pretty Emma couldn’t speak, but when she looked up to thank the little boy, he wasn’t there. She was very surprised.

Where did he disappear to? Emma didn’t know, but she carried the ring carefully back to the hotel to show her parents. They weren’t sitting in the sun, so Emma went upstairs to their room. Emma’s mother was there. She looked very worried and sad.

‘What’s the matter, Mum?’ Emma asked.

‘I lost my beautiful gold ring when I went for a swim. I was having fun in the waves but it suddenly came off my finger. Emma opened her hand.

‘Is this it?’ she asked.

‘Yes!’ her mother said. ‘Where did you find it?’

‘A pirate’s son fished it out of a rock pool for me,’ Emma answered.

Emma looked out of the hotel window. A pirate ship was sailing away and a little boy was waving to her. And this time, Emma could see them both – the boy and the pirate ship!

The king's colours

My name's Oliver. I'm lucky because Dad and I do a lot of travelling together. I heard this story on the radio last year. I really liked it.

Many thousands of years ago, in a country where the weather was always hot and dry, there was an important but sad king. The king was sad because there weren't many colours in his country. The sands and grasses everywhere were yellow, the skies were always blue and the rocks and stones were all grey. All the animals were grey too – the camels in the sandy desert, the swans and the eagles, the horses in the hills and the hippos and snakes.

'I want more colours in my country,' the king said. 'I want to see white, purple, orange, green, pink and black in my country.'

An old woman heard the king and walked for three days to speak to him. She was tired after her journey but she didn't sleep. She sat down on a large rock, looked at the king and said, 'Don't be sad. I can't give you all six colours ... white, pink, purple, orange, green and black, but I can give you three more colours for your country. Which three colours would you like most of all?'

The king thought and thought and then slept, and then thought and thought again and then slept. On the third day, he had an answer for the old woman.

'Most of all, I'd like the colours orange, black and white,' he said. 'Orange because that colour is like yellow but it looks warmer and more interesting. Orange in my country could make me happy again. I'd like black because I never see black in the day. Black is an excellent, strong colour and black in my country could make me feel stronger again, too. I'd like white because white is the colour of the light from the moon and I know that white in my country could make my heart sing. These three colours could make me the happiest king in the world.'

The woman looked at the king kindly and, a minute later, a butterfly flew onto his shoulder. Its wings were a lovely orange colour. The king smiled. 'Amazing!' he said.

After another minute, a big black beetle climbed out from under a rock. The king was so happy he jumped up and down and waved his arms in the air. 'I feel stronger. Wonderful!' he said.

Another minute later, a beautiful white wolf ran down the hill towards them. When the king saw the white wolf, his heart began to sing. 'Excellent!' he said.

But this wasn't enough for the king. 'Please old woman. Make one of the animals in my country orange, black AND white,' he said.

The old woman said, 'That wish is more difficult. But climb your highest hill and find an orange fruit, five black beans and some white bread. Bring these to me. Go now. I have some hard work to do.'

The king climbed the highest hill, found the food and carried it carefully back to the old woman. The orange butterfly, the black beetle and the white wolf followed him on his long journey.

The king put the food on the old woman's rock and waited. He waited for a week and then another week and another. 'I don't mind, I can wait,' he thought each time the day ended and the night began.

But at the end of the third week, he was tired and he fell asleep. The next day, the king woke up suddenly in the midday sun. He looked at the rock. The orange fruit, the black beans and the white bread weren't there. Then something touched his back. 'Old woman,' he whispered. 'Is that you?'

But it wasn't the old woman. An enormous tiger – an amazing, wonderful, excellent tiger was standing behind him. It jumped in the air to show the king its strong orange, black and white striped legs and body and then lay down in the yellow grass in front of the grey rocks under the blue, blue sky. Then it waved its tail and turned its head to look kindly at the king.

'WOW!' the king said. 'Now I can smile my biggest smile. Now, my legs, arms and back feel strong and straight, and now my heart is singing loudly again.'

The king often went to wait by the old woman's rock. She never came back but red, purple and green colours slowly began to appear in his country as well. Red birds flew above large red strawberries that grew between the grey rocks. Purple snakes slept between purple sweet potato plants that grew strong and tall from under the yellow grasses. Green frogs jumped between the pink flowers and green pea plants grew high in the blue sky and waved their leaves in the wind. Soon the country was a much more colourful place for the king to smile, walk and sing in.

Robert's envelopes

Robert lived in a flat in a tall grey building in the city centre. From his window, he could only see other enormous skyscrapers, lots of taxis and other noisy traffic in the busy streets, and far away, the motorway.

Sometimes this made Robert feel unhappy. He liked watching television programmes about exploring countries where there were waterfalls, lakes or wonderful beaches. His favourite stories were about sailing across the ocean to have adventures with people who lived on amazing islands or in other unusual and exciting places.

‘Why must we live in the middle of a city?’ he asked his mother.

‘Because my job at the hospital is here, Robert. But perhaps we can have a quiet holiday somewhere in the countryside next summer. Would you like that?’

‘Oh yes,’ Robert laughed.

After Robert put on his pyjamas and got into to bed that night, he thought about going on holiday. But then he remembered something. Last year, his mother said the same thing, but they spent the summer at home in the city again because they didn’t have enough money to buy tickets or to stay in hotels. ‘Oh well,’ he thought. ‘One day, perhaps.’

On the school bus the next morning, Robert looked through the window and saw a boat on the river.

'I'd like to travel down the river on a boat or across the sea on a huge ship one day, perhaps,' he thought. Then he saw a train on a bridge near the city station. 'I'd like to go over a high bridge on a fast train one day, too,' he thought. Then he looked up into the sky and saw a plane. 'I'd like to fly on a plane one day as well. I could look out of its windows at the woods and mountains below,' he thought.

When school finished, Robert didn't want to go home by bus. He decided to walk. He walked past the shoe factory, the chemist's and then past the police station and around the corner at the bottom of the hill. But after he walked past the sports stadium, too, he began to feel tired so he sat down for a minute on the low wall outside the post office.

Then a strange thing happened. A black and white bird flew down from the sky and dropped an envelope between Robert's feet and then flew away again. Robert picked it up. On the front of the envelope, it said, 'Read me,' so Robert did.

Robert opened the envelope. There was some writing on a blue piece of paper inside. Robert read it very carefully.

'If you find this message, go and look in your biggest, oldest book.'

Robert couldn't understand the message so he put it in his pocket and when he got home, he read it again.

'In your biggest, oldest book. What does that mean?'

Robert decided to try something. He got a chair from the kitchen and carried it into the living room and stood on it. Their biggest and oldest book was on the top shelf of the bookcase. It was really heavy.

When Robert opened the book, a thin envelope fell out. Inside the envelope was a strange card. It looked really old. When Robert opened it, he saw lots of numbers inside. Robert jumped off the chair and went to show the card to his mother.

'What's this, Mum?' he asked.

'It's the kind of card that banks wrote in a long time ago,' she said. 'This person was rich. They saved lots of money. Oh look! There's a name on the front – Helen Bird. This is amazing! That was my grandmother's name. We must go to the bank tomorrow and show this to Mr Flag.'

When Mr Flag saw the card the next day, he picked up his telephone and spoke to someone in an excited kind of way. He had a big smile on his face.

'Well,' he said to Robert's mother when he finished talking on the phone, 'you must thank your son for finding this. Your grandmother left all this money in our bank for you a long time ago, but we didn't know that until now. What would you like to buy with it?'

Robert's mother smiled, too. 'Something that Robert wants very much.'

When Robert came home from school later that afternoon, he found a bigger envelope on the kitchen table. 'Open it if you want,' his mother said.

Inside the envelope, there were two plane tickets and two train tickets and two boat tickets.

'Mr Flag says we've got enough money now. We can have a really great holiday.'

'Because of your grandmother's little bank card?' Robert asked.

'Yes,' his mother said.

Robert looked out of the window at the beautiful sky. He couldn't see the black and white bird high in the clouds, but he knew it was there.

'And all because of the big black and white bird,' Robert smiled.

'What do you mean?' his mother asked.

'That's my special secret,' Robert answered.

Lara and the mountain lion

Lara is my mother's best friend. She's a vet, that's a doctor who looks after sick pets and wild animals, too. I want to be a vet, as well. One day I asked her, 'Why did you decide to be a vet, Lara?'

'It's a strange story, George,' she answered. 'When I was your age, I was often alone and I had no-one – no brothers or sisters to play with. So, for a few weeks each winter, I stayed with my three cousins. They lived high up in the mountains. They were tall and strong and could ski very fast. They were very good at snowboarding and climbing, too. But I couldn't ski, snowboard or climb. My legs weren't strong enough. I was often ill as well, so I had to carry different medicines with me all the time.

'One day, my cousins wanted to climb the mountain that was behind their house. They said, "You must come with us, Lara." They were unkind. They knew I wasn't well enough or brave enough.

'I tried to follow them up the path, but I soon got tired, so I had to stop and sit down. My cousins laughed at my red face. "See you later, then," they called and went on up the mountain without me.

'I started to feel better after a few minutes, but then I heard an animal behind me. I felt a big, warm, furry, soft face on my shoulder. It was a mountain lion.'

'Wow!' I said.

'I was very afraid, but I couldn't run away because my legs and knees still felt weak, so I just sat there. The lion opened its mouth ...

... and said, "I've got a terrible toothache." Well, I knew all about sore teeth because I often had a toothache, so I gave it some medicine that I kept in my jacket pocket.'

I laughed and said, 'I don't believe you, Lara!'

'Why not?' she asked. 'Strange things happen in the world all the time.'

'The lion and I sat and talked about X-rays and Saturdays and other things and after a few minutes, it said, "My tooth's feeling much better now, but I've got a very bad stomach-ache. I ate too much food after I woke up this morning."

'I often had a stomach-ache, so I had a bottle of stomach-ache medicine in my backpack. I put some on a little plastic spoon and gave it to the lion and then we sat and chatted about bandages and jam sandwiches and other things.

'After a few minutes, the lion said, "My stomach's feeling much better now, but I've got a horrible headache. I lay in the sun for hours yesterday."

'I knew about headaches, so I took a clean spotted handkerchief from another pocket and put it in the snow before I put it on the lion's furry head. "That's very cold but it feels fantastic!" the lion said. "Thank you so much."

'After that we sat and spoke about temperatures and school teachers and other things. But suddenly, the lion jumped up and said, "I'm feeling grrrrreat! How can I help you, now?"

'I pointed at the mountain. My cousins were already high up above us. "Can you take me up to the top?" I asked.

"Sure!" it said. "No problem." So I jumped on its back and put both arms around its neck.

'The lion ran faster than the wind. It's really wonderful to ride on a lion's back. You must try it one day!'

I laughed.

'When we got to the top, we stood quietly together for a minute or two, then the mountain lion disappeared into a dark cave. Soon after that, my cousins arrived.

"The view's amazing, isn't it?" I said.

'My cousins were so surprised, they couldn't speak!'

'What happened next?' I asked.

'Well,' said Lara, 'they never laughed at me again. And every year, I went back to the same special place where I met the lion and it came to speak to me again. We always had wonderful conversations, the lion and I. Sometimes I took it more medicine and I often rode on its back in the snow. I always felt safe when we were together and we helped each other a lot. I knew then that I wanted to be a vet one day. So that's the answer to your question.'

Lara waited for a minute and then laughed.

'I'm sorry,' she said. 'It's just a story.'

But then she turned round and looked at a photo on her desk. It was of a young girl and a mountain lion. They were sitting on a rock in the snow and the lion had its big, soft, furry face on her shoulder.

Lara turned back and smiled at me. 'Now I must work,' she said, 'but would you like some strawberries or a honey cookie before you go?'

Harry's diary

Tuesday 10 October

Today was NOT a brilliant day but it wasn't bad.

I got up late because I forgot to turn on my phone. It ALWAYS wakes me up at 7.23. If I don't get up then, Sarah (my older sister) gets to the bathroom before I do (she always gets up at 7.25) and she takes 17 minutes to wash her face, clean her teeth and comb her hair. Sisters!

So today, I didn't wash before I got dressed. Never mind! I hope no-one sees.

Dad was coughing a lot when I ran downstairs. He put salt, not sugar, in his coffee because he was listening to the news on the radio and reading his newspaper at the same time and not looking at his spoon.

I had a bowl full to the top of my favourite cereal. Oh ... and our fat cat, Sausage, ate a spider. Holly (my little sister) said,

'Sausage might run faster now she's got a spider

inside her!'

My school shirt is pink (I've only got one at the moment). Mum washed it with my red football socks. I couldn't believe it. 'But pink is such a lovely colour, Harry,' she said. I don't think my mum understands boys.

There was a new driver on the school bus. When he opened his mouth to ask me for my ticket, I saw that he had three gold teeth!

I like making Holly frightened so I tell her scary stories sometimes. I may tell her that the driver locks his gold teeth in a secret box with a special silver key. And a really long snake sleeps around the box with the key in its mouth each night. I love my little sister but she's difficult to live with sometimes. She broke our old computer. She put a biscuit in the hole where the CDs went!

I had to hurry to get to school but I got there at 8.38. William and Emma, my best friends were already in the playground. When I was chatting to them about a program I'm using to make a puzzle app, I put my rucksack down next to theirs. Emma's rucksack and mine look the same and, yes, of course, I picked up hers when I ran into class.

No English dictionary so I had to borrow one. No lesson timetable. No homework file. No phone. No geography book. But a dinosaur project, some glue, a pair of scissors, some science homework, a picture of an octopus and some expensive chocolate (gold paper!).

I ate the chocolate before I gave Emma's rucksack back to her (I shouldn't do things like that, but it tasted delicious!).

It rained a little at morning break, but I didn't mind. We were playing volleyball so I took my sweater off (which was hiding my pink shirt). I wanted the rain to change its colour back to white again, but it didn't. It's STILL pink.

In our next lesson – history – a boy called Michael made a noise that sounded like a mouse and whispered to Katy who called out, 'A mouse! A mouse!'

Our teacher, two of the girls and my friend Richard jumped on their chairs. I tried not to laugh but it was really funny. Mr Brush, our school cleaner came to find it, but he couldn't of course.

When we were playing football in the afternoon break, I kicked the ball so high it went up onto the roof. I climbed up to get it and found three more footballs up there. So we've got four footballs now. Excellent!

I was lucky no-one saw me on the roof. 'That's NOT part of our playground, boys,' Mr Rocket, our gym teacher says.

The school bus left before I got to the bus stop because William and I were talking about inventions. We want to invent a shampoo that tastes like bananas, and socks that always smell like flowers.

So I had to walk home today. I didn't mind but my head and shoulders, shirt, trousers and shoes got really wet because it started to rain again. When my sister, Sarah, saw me, she said, 'Well, you needed a wash.'

I went upstairs to dry my hair and put my jeans and black T-shirt on. My school shirt is STILL pink. Oh well, never mind. I'm beginning to like the colour, actually, but I hope Mum washes it for me this evening, then it may not be so pink tomorrow.

We had chips for dinner tonight. Mum only lets us have them once a week. I had 52. I counted each one then Holly gave me 5 of hers so I had 57. Excellent!

What else? Oh, Sausage came into the house with some plastic false teeth in her mouth. I told Holly that they were great grandma's and that she lost them last weekend when she fell asleep in the garden. Actually, they were some old toy ones that William gave to me.

Sausage looked so funny. We couldn't stop laughing.

I did my information technology homework tonight ... well, most of it. The wi-fi stopped working and I needed to find something online. I might try to finish it tomorrow morning. I practised on my drums too, so poor Mum got a headache again.

OK, my teeth are clean. None of MY teeth are plastic! I've got my favourite old pyjamas on. They've got spaceships on them so they look a bit young, but it doesn't matter. I still like them. What's the time? 9.45 and my phone is on so it knows I must wake up at 7.23.

Goodnight world. Goodnight me. Oh no! There's a biscuit in my bed. Holly!!!

Frank	A quiet, kind boy.
Dan	Frank's friend who is loud and funny and likes doing exciting things.
Mr Whistle	A man who lives in a large house next to Katy's home.
A wild horse

Scene 1

Helen and Katy's large garden with high trees. Katy is texting. Helen is dancing.

Helen You're very quiet, Katy. Who are you sending messages to now?

Katy No-one! It's a secret.

Helen Tell me.

Katy No, I can't. Sorry. It's just someone who needs my help.

Helen Boring! Turn off your phone and come and play with me. This tree is as tall as the mountains. I'm going to climb to the top, find answers to the world's four most important questions and then draw pictures of iguanas or eagles or foxes or dinosaurs or something. Let's do it together.

Katy In a minute! Just let me ...

Helen OK, but hurry! I can already think of two questions ...

Katy All right. There. Message sent. But I need to keep my phone in my pocket. Have you got some paper?

Helen Yes!

Katy And some crayons?

Helen No, mine are missing. I can't remember where I put them. Perhaps you could give ...

Katy Yes, OK. You can borrow mine. Don't drop them. Look after them, please. Actually ... I'm going to carry them. Go on then. You go first.

Scene 2

The girls are climbing up the tree, Helen first, Katy next. Katy is carrying the paper and crayons. Next to their large garden is lots of open land where a white horse is eating grass. A man on a quad bike is riding into view.

Helen Come on! You're really slow.

Katy I know. I'm trying, but I'm not as good as you at climbing.

Helen Here, take my hand. There. We're at the top. It's amazing up here, isn't it? Now. Question number one. Why don't people let children drive racing cars?

Katy Racing cars? Well, only a few really brave and clever people do that. Anyway, they're really dangerous and difficult to drive. But you can drive one if you play Dan's new computer game!

Helen Dan's fun, but he's too noisy.

Katy Really?

Helen Yes. OK. Second question. Why do kids have to go to school? I want to be an artist or a mechanic, the manager of an expensive shoe shop, a famous photographer or film star, a queen of, of ... anywhere or a wonderful clothes designer!

Katy I know. But you have to study and practice for a long time to be all those things, Helen. Well, not to be a queen perhaps ...

Helen Hmm. OK. Third thing. Why are mangoes more orange inside than oranges? And my fourth question – cats love mice. Right? We can only buy meat or fish food for our cat. Why can't you buy cat food that tastes like mice instead?

Katy I don't know, Helen.

Helen All right! Well, let's forget about the world's problems. Give me my paper and your crayons and let's start looking for iguanas, eagles, foxes and dinosaurs.

Katy [laughing] You are funny! You know dinosaurs are extinct, [pointing] but THEY aren't!

Helen What? Who?

Katy Frank and Dan ... look! They're racing across Mr Whistle's land. Mr Whistle's chasing them on his quad bike.

Helen And that wild white horse is running after them, too.

Dan [Calling to farmer] We're sorry!

Helen What did they do? Perhaps they took some of his grapes, lemons or apples.

Dan We said we're sorry!

Katy [calling] Frank! We're up here. Are you OK?

Dan [shouting] No, he's not! But we can run as fast as the wind, can't we, Frank?

Frank Can we? Quick! There's the gate.

Katy I'm worried about them. They might fall over. I'm going to climb down and run to meet them.

Helen Well, I'm not. I'm going to stay up here. I'm sure there are dinosaurs here somewhere. Give me your phone before you go, Katy. Then if I see one, I can take a photo of it and send it to all the newspapers.

Katy All right. But be careful with it.

* * * * *

Scene 3

Katy is talking to the two boys by the gate. The horse is behind the gate watching them. Mr Whistle has got off his quad bike. There's a problem with it and he's trying to repair its engine.

Katy Why were Mr Whistle and that horse chasing you?

Dan Mr Whistle was angry because we took some of his grapes.

Frank Because YOU took some grapes.

Dan To give to that horse. The horse was running after us because ...

Frank Because it wanted the grapes!

Katy Whose idea was that?

Dan Frank's.

Frank Dan's. [giving Katy some grapes] Would you like some?

Katy Not now, Frank.

Frank [quietly] Hey, thanks for keeping my secret.

Katy That's OK.

Frank And thanks for helping me. You're so kind and your idea was really great.

Katy Sshhh.
Dan Why are you two whispering?
Katy We aren't whispering.
Dan And where's Helen?
Katy She's at the top of her tree.
Look! She should come and join us. We could go to the stream. There might be frogs in some of the little ponds there, too. Helen! Come down as quickly as you can. We're going to the stream with you or without you! Oh look. She's coming. I hope she doesn't fall ... Helen, no! Don't jump! That's too high.

[Helen arrives.]

Dan Hi, Helen. OK?

Helen Sure.

Dan Are you going to come with us, then? We're going to look for frogs.

Helen That sounds so boring.
Dan Aren't you interested in frogs?
Helen No. I'm interested in racing cars, exciting jobs, mangoes, cat food, iguanas, foxes, eagles and dinosaurs at the moment.
Frank Perhaps we could look for those in the stream too, then!
Helen You mean racing cars?
Dan No!
Katy Mangoes?
Frank No!
Helen Cat food?
Dan No!
Katy Iguanas? Foxes? Eagles?
Frank Perhaps!
Helen Dinosaurs?
Dan Yes!
[Everyone laughs.]

Summer fun
